The event became a forum for the exchange of views on new regulations and legislative changes in the field of digital services or cyber security.

- personal data protection in the era of new technologies,
- artificial intelligence and personal data protection - legal and ethical challenges,
- security of information in the digital age,
- the challenge for data protection authorities in the age of innovation,
- key legislative developments in the area of new technologies 2023/2024.

The two-day expert meeting concluded with a debate entitled. "Key trends of new technologies in the context of personal data protection".

c. Please explain why you think the initiative deserves to be recognised by an award (no more than 200 words)

Issues concerning the relationship between data protection and new technologies, including artificial intelligence, have long been of interest to the Personal Data Protection Office. For a better understanding of the technology, the potential for its use, the benefits and risks, the Office is undertaking a number of educational and scientific initiatives. The latest initiative is a two-day conference in which experts representing both the private and public sectors have been invited to participate. The conference, given the broad spectrum of topics covered, was certainly a compass for all those interested in personal data protection and new technologies. The conference had an international character. In this age of a rapidly changing world, such initiatives are needed. The Personal Data Protection Office received excellent feedback after the event. The organisation of this conference provided the impetus for further intensive discussions on the topics raised during the event.
